AT HIGH POINT MARKET, HENREDON TURNS TO WHAT IT DOES BEST—LUXURY IN GRAND SCALE—AND DELIVERS IN AN IMPRESSIVE NEW SHOWROOM

HIGH POINT, NC - October 2014 - Henredon has been a staple in America's most luxurious homes for over 65 years. Now with an all-new showroom in the historic Market Square building, coupled with exciting new product introductions, it has never been easier to see why the name "Henredon" represents the finest in home furnishings. Specifically this market, Henredon introduces two new collections: Westbury Manor and Référence - both with beautiful new upholstery additions that complement each collection.

First, inspired by the gilded age, Westbury Manor, takes its cues from some of the most extravagant interiors in history. Europe served as a resource library for this collection with late 19th and early 20th century influences which culminate into an industrialized look with Victorian flourishes. Featured woods include: Mahogany, Figured American walnut cathedral, European walnut burl, and angel stump walnut. The finish is a rich deep antique walnut with light patina that looks like a well-kept antique. Hardware was designed specifically for each piece using inspiration from turn-of-the-century original pieces.

Next, Henredon is also pleased to introduce the new upholstery and occasional collection, Référence, by Patrick Aubriot. Henredon worked with Patrick Aubriot, a Paris Architect, to develop a unique and inspired collection of upholstery and occasional. Consisting of three major upholstery settings and three complementary occasional groupings, the collection is decidedly transitional and exquisitely refined. The case goods incorporate a mix of materials including zebrano and rosewood veneers and the finest hand-rubbed finishes, nickel accents, and, on select items, white agate stone. Mr. Aubriot will be with us during the October Market to share his inspirations for this new collection.
